By a News Reporter-Staff News Editor at Pediatrics Week -- Current study results on Child Abuse and Neglect have been published<sup>1-3</sup>. According to news reporting from New Brunswick, New Jersey, by VerticalNews journalists, research stated, "Neglected children's acute hypothalamic-pituitary-adrenal axis (HPA axis) reactivity in response to a laboratory visit was contrasted with that of a comparison group. The authors examined initial salivary cortisol response upon entering the laboratory and its trajectory following a set of tasks designed to elicit negative self-evaluation in 64 children (30 with a history of neglect and 34 demographically matched comparison children)."
